Looking for an on-campus job? Apply to be a College of Letters and Science Peer Advisor!

Applications are due Friday, January 27th.

Visit Aggie Job Link (# 820314) for specific job responsibilities/requirements and application!

WHAT WE DO

The College of Letters and Science (L&S) academic peer advisors play a vital role in providing initial advising for undergraduate students in the College of Letters & Science Undergraduate Education and Advising Office.

Peer advisors work approximately 10-12 hours per week in the L&S Undergraduate Education and Advising office and as a part of the Residence Hall Advising Team (RHAT). They are highly trained to assist students in navigating course selection, major exploration, and university and college requirements.

Current peer advisors partake in ongoing training, professional development workshops, goal setting activities, and are familiar with campus resources and student organizations.

What would you tell someone who is interested in peer advising?

"Peer advising is more than working in the office...you get to present in the residence halls, advise students one on one, and make a difference (whether you know it or not)."

"This job is not only a great opportunity for professional and career growth, but a chance for personal growth as an individual, a student at UC Davis, and as a peer."

"Never have I ever said to myself, 'Ugh. I have to go to work.' Amazing office culture, rewarding experience, empowering."
